Overview

Huiyi Chen advises clients on insurance coverage litigation, antitrust class action, and other major commercial litigation and regulatory matters. Her clients include leading businesses in a wide array of industries, including food and beverage, financial services, media and broadcasting, transportation, hospitality, and real estate. Huiyi has experience in all aspects of trial advocacy and plays a key role in brief writing, discovery management, and trial preparation in precedent-setting matters.

Huiyi regularly publishes articles for Law360 on recent insurance developments and spoke about insurance law topics at a nationwide American Bar Association conference. She has represented pro bono clients in asylums, exonerations, human trafficking and labor disputes, landlord-tenant disputes, sentencings, and prisoners' rights. Her active pro bono practice enables her to always look for practical, cost-effective, and innovative solutions to her clients' legal issues.
